H. S. LOSES TO KENOSHA; SCORE 6-0

WAUCONDA NEXT GAME

In what was no doubt the finest foot ball of the season Saturday, Kenosha defeated Antioch 6 to 0. The Kenosha boys outweighed our boys considerably and were far more seasoned players, but did not show the team work aggressiveness that the Antioch boys did.

The game was played on a wet field which gave the Kenosha boys a great advantage on account of their weight. A dry field would have probably brought another story. The Kenosha boys started off with a rush, playing a straight line plunging game, their heavy backs often dragging the Antioch tacklers three and four yards before they were able to down their man.

The second period opened up with the ball on Antioch's 11-yard line with Kenosha the possessors and from where Kenosha finally managed to push it over after a series of line plays. They failed to kick the goal.

The third and fourth periods were distinctly in favor of the Antioch team, they managing to tear off two or three ten and fifteen yard runs, but on account of the slippery ball were unable to complete a forward pass. Once, during the third period, the Kenosha boys threatened the Antioch goal, having the ball on the 9-yard line with the goal to go, but the Antioch line stiffened and the ball went to Antioch on their own 3-yard line from where Haley punted out of danger.

The boys all played a wonderful game, the line men time and again holding the charge of the heavy Kenosha backs for no gain. Sheehan particularly played a wonderful game, breaking through the line and getting the man with the ball before he crossed his own line. Too much praise cannot be given to the entire line from end to end for the wonderful showing made in this game.

The wet grounds was the cause of the Antioch backs for not being able to get away with some long gains and the line plunging plays were of no avail against the heavy opposition.

Taken as a whole the game was a fine one to watch and the work of the Antioch boys in what was their first game ever played on a heavy field was remarkable. If there was only some way the management could arrange another game with that Waukegan bunch—oh joy!

Next Saturday Antioch will meet Waukegan high school at the high school gridiron. Waukegan defeated Antioch at Waukegan a few weeks ago and it is up to the local boys to get revenge. The Waukegan defeat came through the result of several first string men being missing from the line up. Saturday will see the local boys at their full strength.

Methodist Episcopal Church News

A new day has dawned in Antioch Methodist church. The day of small things is passing. Henceforth the trend is steadily upward. The First Quarterly Conference held on Monday evening took advanced ground for an enlarged program of service for the community.

Now the next great step in the upward progress of the church has come. The All-Day Religious Festival last Sunday was full of unusual religious inspiration. The whole atmosphere of the day was full of the feeling of a new life and courage and faith, a real confidence in God that this church is now to arise and lay hold of the life of the community in a measure never known before.

Several of the Sunday School workers had just returned from the County Sunday School convention, enthused with some new plans which were immediately adopted by the Sunday School for its larger usefulness. The pastor spoke "Loving the Church," taking for the text "Christ loved the church and gave Himself for it." He pointed out that Christ loved the church not a little, but with a vast, deep, passionate love that made His whole life one mighty sacrifice, made up of daily sacrifices, and at last laid His very life on the altar in a tragic death of unmeasured suffering—for the church. He followed a fervent appeal to every one who has named the name of Christ to be a true follower of Christ and love the church not a little, but with a great passionate love that is ready and glad to give up time and money and comfort and everything necessary for the church which was shown to be the only hope of the world.

There was universal response to the appeal. After the splendid dinner served by the Ladies' Aid, there were short talks by several of the members, and subscriptions for the finances of the church were taken, and then the teams went out and made the ever-member canvases, retuning in the evening with reports far in advance of anything this church has known for many years, which made possible the enlarged program projected by the Quarterly conference Monday evening.

A good spiritual service was held during the afternoon and the Epworth League served an excellent lunch at six and held one of the best Epworth League devotional meetings at seven for a long time.

The coming Sunday morning at 11:00 the discourse will be on the theme "More Religion." Miss Mary Tiffany will favor us with a vocal solo. The evening sermon will be the first of a series on the Ten Commandments. The first one will be on "The First Commandment." The series will be on Sunday evenings.

Quite a number of the Epworth Leaguers are going to the District Convention this coming Saturday evening in Grace church, Chicago.

Niggemeyer Held Without Bail on Murder Charge

The continuance in the Johnson inquest Sunday brought no further developments in the case. New testimonials were taken by the state's attorney from Drs. V. I. Englert and Fred Bawe of Chicago, attending physicians to Niggemeyer who had slight injury in the left eye. Mr. Witt, of Chicago, was on the stand and gave very little light on the subject. Charles Holmes was placed on the stand and questioned by the defense, Attorneys Dean, O'Brien and Owen.

The jury had no questions to ask and vacated the room, later returning with the findings which were read by the foreman, that John J. Johnson of Chicago came to his death Saturday, October 22, while hunting on Fox lake from a shot fired from a gun supposing to be that of Geo. Niggemeyer and that said Geo. Niggemeyer be handed over to the grand jury.

Most of the Niggemeyer family were present at the inquest, including George, and he received the finding in the case very calmly.

As Niggemeyer has not been indicted yet, nor have the attorneys held a conference, there are no new developments in the case, unless the judge should recall the grand jury or set the case over for the December term was not learned upon going to press.

SAY DEALERS NAME PRICE FOR MILK

Statement of Marketing Company and Milk Producers Association Conflict

PRODUCERS MEET AT ELGIN

A communication received from the Milk Producers association announces: "Again the fluid buyers have set their own price for the November milk at $1.80 per cwt., f. o. b. country plants for 3.5 milk. On this basis the can price delivered in the city would be $1.60. We have been advised that the Marketing company are announcing the same price as posted by the dealers. This is the Nestles Food Company's October price. We also have from a reliable source that at some Wisconsin points the Nestles company are offering for November 15c per cwt. more than the October price.

"The Milk Board of the Milk Producers association have on several occasions during the past two weeks attempted to negotiate for the members a price more nearly the cost of production, and your Milk Board has the assurance of some of the buyers that had it not been for the fact that the producers are divided into so many factions and some of whom have not seen fit to support the Milk Producers association the fullest extent, also the fact that the present executive officers of the Marketing company are wholly ignoring the cost of production and are openly planning to enter the distributors market in Chicago with cheaper milk, the buyers are taking advantage of this condition to protect their own interests. Your Milk Board would have no trouble in negotiating the sale of milk at a much better price.

Since receiving the above letter it is understood that certain of the large dealers have announced the price of $1.75 for November milk.

It is impossible just now to analyze the situation on account of conflicting reports conveyed from the Marketing company and the Milk Producers association.

The following report was received from the Milk Producers Co-operative Marketing company, Wednesday. After careful consideration of the present situation, the executive committee of the Marketing company announces that the price of fluid milk for the month of November will be $1.80 per hundred pounds for 3.5 milk, delivered to the country receiving plants; this price subject to the 4 cents a point differential for each one-tenth of a point variation in the butterfat test.

Condensed price, $2. per hundred pounds for 4% milk on direct ratio. Can milk f. o. b. Chicago, arrived at by the usual formula, based on the hundred pound price.

The spread for October, 10% of the gross value of milk at Marketing company price. Very truly yours, The Milk Producers' Co-operative Marketing Co.

T. R. KEENE, Sec.

The situation is evidently developing into a struggle between the Marketing company and the Milk Producers association and the meeting that has been called for at Elgin Friday will no doubt prove of importance to the dairymen. The following communication has been sent out to all local secretaries.

Notice to Local Secretaries
November 1,

Dear Secretary:
The board of directors of the Milk Producers Association, are as you know, elected annually in the various counties. The number of directors to which each county is entitled is determined by the number of membership in the county. At the last election, several counties elected more directors than the membership of the counties would justify. Therefore, in order to avoid a re-occurrence of that condition, the board of directors passed motion which required that the membership at December 1st, determined the number of directors each county shall be entitled to for the coming year. Immediately after December 1st, it will become the duty of this office to figure the number of paid up members in each local, and notify the various county officers of the number of members in their respective counties and upon these

"Kids" Play Many Hallowe'en Pranks

The Hallowe'en pranks played by youngsters this year was not as damaging as in past years, but the kiddies probably enjoyed themselves as much as the kids of yester-years.

The writer had the opportunity of seeing the little ones at their mischief—encountering a gang of little fellows, followed them on their journey of joys.

Organizing in front of Reeve's drug store, where an interesting display of balloons were flying about the window, they started for Panowski's blacksmith shop where they dragged a wagon box away; further down the street they upset a playhouse, when a dog arrived on the scene and scattered the gang in every direction. Reorganizing on Lake street, they went to pay "Bob" Wilton a sociable visit, but "Bob" was on the job and two little lads came near receiving a spanking. I turned around just in time to see Walt Chinn's popcorn emporium strolling down the thoroughfare, while around the corner came a little fellow rolling a flivver ensing down the street as if it were a hoop. And when day-break arrived Tuesday morning, it showed the battle must have lasted throughout the night for—

There was corn shocks galore in front of the Brook bank—

The same for Otto Klass—

Ditto for Doc Beebe and many others—

One perfectly good hayrack in front of Kettlehut's—

"Bill" Rosing's easy chair at the postoffice—

One heavy iron-wheeled wagon trying to get into James' office—

Etc.

Edgar Lewis' Adventure Tale at the Crystal

"Lahoma," the Edgar Lewis-Pathe feature at the Crystal theatre. Saturday, is a colorful, vivid, adventurous drama of the early days in Oklahoma, the last state to be admitted to the Union. Oklahoma placed its star in the American flag on November 16, 1907, and as short a time as 1889 it was thrown open to homeseekers. That was a wonderful day. Thousands of prospective settlers collected along the border of the new land, and at twelve o'clock, at a given signal, the race began for land claims.

John Breckenridge Ellis, in writing "Lahoma," chose these early history-making days for his locale. It is a story of "boomers," homeseekers, Indians, outlaws and cowboys. It is crammed to the brim with daring adventure and dangerous deeds, a pretty little romance weaving the whole together.

To little Peaches Jackson and Louise Burnham fall the role of "Lahoma," who grows from babyhood to beautiful young girlhood in the story. Russell Simpson, Jack Perrin, Will Jeffers, Wade Boteler, and many others keep the action moving at a swift pace.

Mrs. Josephine Belter Died Monday Morning

The death of Mrs. Josephine Garwood Belter came Monday morning at the Belter home on Spafford street after a long illness of three years.

Miss Gorwood was united in marriage to William Belter fourteen years ago and to them two boys were born, one dying in infancy. The Belter family lived here all their life.

The funeral service will be held at the Methodist church this afternoon at two o'clock with interment at the Hill side cemetery.

Fire Department Will Meet Monday Evening

Regular meeting of the fire department will be held on Monday evening November 7th, instead of Tuesday evening, as the village council will hold an adjourned meeting for that evening.

BOARD TO RECOMMEND STREET PLAN

Meeting With Property Owners in Business Section
Next Tuesday

BIG ATTENDANCE EXPECTED

NOTICE

At a special meeting of the board last Tuesday night for the discussion of the plans for the new cement roadway through the village a motion was made and carried that Mr. Runyard, the village attorney, be instructed to draw up an ordinance relative to sewer and water connections.

This ordinance will make it necessary to furnish a bond for the digging up of the street for water or sewer connections after the letting of contracts for street improvements. As the cost of sewer or water connections after the completion of the new road will cost approximately $100 above the present cost it is advisable that those property owners on Main street who have not completed this connection get busy and have the work done this fall.

A special meeting of the Board was held in the village hall Tuesday night. Mr. C. E. Russell of Waukegan, county engineer of highways, and "Gene" Runyard were present. Mr. Russell presented the plan drawn up showing the lines of the proposed plans for the improved road through the village.

Mr. Russell gave a thorough explanation as to the obstacles that would be met in this undertaking, after which there was a lengthy discussion by the board members and Mr. Runyard as to the advisability of adopting these plans, after which a motion was made and seconded that the plans of curbing, sidewalks and grading and the width of paving in the business district as submitted by County Engineer Russell be adopted. The motion was carried unanimously.

The next step taken by the board was as to the best means of getting in touch with property owners along the main street from Johnnott street to the creek and get their views on the proposed plans. It was finally decided to hold an adjourned meeting on next Tuesday night, (Nov. 8,) in the village hall with the property owners, the Antioch News to be a medium to notify these owners.

As the adoption of this plan is no doubt one of the greatest steps ever taken by the village for the improvement of the village and it is hoped that all those interested in Main street property will make it a point to be in attendance Tuesday night.

The plans as proposed by Mr. Russell and adopted by the board for recommendation to the village call for a 56-foot street through the village from Johnnott street to Depot street leaving a nine foot sidewalk on either side. The plans of the paving call for an 18-foot slab of reinforced cement through the center of the street, banked by a 19-foot paving of brick on both sides. This brick paving will cost about 20% more than an all-cement road, but was deemed the best plan as a solid cement roadway would make it almost prohibitive to do any water or sewer work after completion and any work of this nature would soon ruin the road.

A discussion of sewer and water connections along the main street and other sections of town where improvements are contemplated ended in a motion being made and carried that Attorney Runyard be instructed to draw up an ordinance relative to the sewer and water connections.

The estimated cost of connections after the completion of a cement road was placed at $100 above the present cost and the new ordinance will no doubt require a bond for the proper completion of any work of this nature. Mr. Russell was very pleased to inform the board that he had received information today (Tuesday) that the district engineer for the state had been instructed by the state highway commission to complete his survey of Route 21. The survey on this route had only been completed as far as Libertyville.

MYSTERY.

Synopsis.—In a New York jewelry store Philip Severn, United States consular agent, notices a small, box which attracts him. He purchases it. Later he discovers in a secret compartment a writing giving a clue to a revolutionary movement in this country seeking to overthrow the Chilean government. The writing mentions a rendezvous, and Severn decides to investigate. Finding the place mentioned in the writing is a saloon in the vicinity. A woman in the place is met by a man, seemingly by appointment, and Severn, his suspicions aroused, follows them. They go to the designated meeting place, an abandoned iron foundry. At the rendezvous Severn is accepted as one of the conspirators and admitted. He meets a stranger who addresses him as Harry Daly. The incident plays into Severn's hands and he accepts it. His new acquaintance is a notorious thief, "Gentleman George" Harris. Concealed, Severn hears the girl he had followed address the conspirators. She urges them to hasten the work of the revolution. The girl discovers Severn listening. She accepts his explanation of his presence and makes an appointment to meet him next day. He tells her his name is Daly. Harris informs him of a scheme he has to secure a sum amounting to $100,000, the revolutionary fund, and offers to "split" with him. Severn accepts the proposition. Harris learns it was his new friend and a "Captain Alva" who had lost the box which started him on the trail. Harris tells him the woman is Marie Gessler. He arranges to meet Severn next day at Tom Costigan's saloon. Leaving the building, Severn finds the body of Captain Alva, stabbed to death with a hatpin dagger. He remembers having seen it, or one like it, in Marie Gessler's hat. Severn is forced to believe she is the slayer.

There was no outward sign of any surveillance as I turned into the block; indeed except for a grocery truck before one of the houses, and an organ-grinder at the farther corner, entertaining a group of children, the street was entirely deserted. Mustering my courage, and with a feeling of deep excitement, I advanced up the steps of the house numbered 247, and, finding refuge in the outer vestibule, rang the bell. I heard no distant throb, but within a moment or two the door opened a crack, held in that position by a chain, and the face of a middle-aged woman peered out at me.

"Well, what is it?" she snapped, in no encouraging tone.

"I should like to see Miss Conrad," I began apologetically. "I have an appointment with her."

"Not here yer ain't, young man, for there ain't nobody by that name in this house."

"Are you sure? This is 247, is it not? That was the number given me. She was to be here at two o'clock."

"This yer is 247 all right. I ain't denyin' that," the voice more acid than ever, "but there ain't no Miss Conrad yere; so that's all there is about it."

"But there must be."

"Must be nuthin'! I guess I know. I've been yere seventeen years, and ther never was nobody of that name

"Well, What is it?" She Snapped.

ever in this house. Besides, I'm house-cleannin' and can't stand yere talkin' all day."

"Do you know a man named Krantz?" I stung at her desperately, in a last effort to arouse some response. "Adolph Krantz."

"No, I don't; ther ain't none of those people yere, I tell yer."

The door slammed shut in my face, and I heard a bolt shot into place—the interview was ended.

sent me on this wild goose chase so that she might laugh over my sim-plicity. But was this true? If so, how was I to account for the strange coincidence that both she and Harris had named the same number, and street? It could not have occurred merely through chance. Something must have happened in the meanwhile to overthrow all her plans, and to cause this rabid housekeeper to even deny her very existence. And I held the key of explanation—the murder of Alva.

Beyond all doubt here was both cause and effect. The girl had intended to either see me herself, or by proxy in the form of this mysterious Miss Conrad. But what had since occurred had compelled a sudden change in plans, a necessity for concealing her escape. There was no way in which she could notify me, but she might very easily have telephoned to her landlady. And, if the place was what I suspected it to be, she might have every confidence that her secret would be guarded.

I glanced up at the front of the house, searching the windows, but without results. The curtains were closely drawn to keep out the sun, and the place appeared forlorn and deserted. At the delicatessen shop on the corner I gained a gleam of light, but merely enough to strengthen my former judgment. The keeper, a fox-on-haired Swede, was loquacious enough, but had only been in business there a few weeks.

"247 Le Compté, you say. Yes, she takes roomers; some are men, and some are women. They come in here and buy, but I never ask the names; it was all cash, so why should I care? Sometimes I hear them call names—sure; but never Conrad. The woman what keeps the house? Wait and I tell you; it is on the looks; ah! you read as she wrote it for me—Mrs. August Waldron; maybe a widow."

I left him with the familiar sound of the name ringing in my ears—the whole thing was traveling in a circle, and the circle was growing continually more compact. Blindly, I was stumbling up against it here and there most unexpectedly. August Waldron, beyond doubt, was Ivan Waldron's wife. No wonder her house was designated the meeting place for those people.

I returned to the hotel. Only as I stood before the door did I realize that the newshy was calling out. "Extra! All about the murder!" I felt that my face was white, and that my hand shook, yet I hastily shoved copies of half a dozen sheets, shoving them into my pockets.

The reports were mostly alike, exceedingly brief and unsatisfactory, except that they conveyed the impression that thus far the police possessed no real clue as to the perpetrator of the crime. No one connected with the meeting the night before was mentioned in any article, nor was any mention of such a meeting mentioned. I read the last line with a distinct feeling of relief, dropping the paper on the floor.

They had discovered no clue, nothing whatever to work upon. The interior of the car had yielded no evidence of its former occupant, the only reference being to mud on the floor. Outside all footprints had been obliterated by the falling rain. No one in the neighborhood had heard a sound, or witnessed any movement. The whole affair was shrouded in mystery.

What, under these conditions, was my duty? What could I either do, or say, to clarify this tragedy, and bring the guilty to justice? I sat there for an hour thinking and smoking, endeavoring to answer these queries. I could study out no clear way to any confession, which would not directly involve myself in the toils of the police, or else implicate Marie Gessler, so as to make any defense on my part almost impossible. No doubt she was guilty, yet I could not drive myself to openly charge her with the crime. There must be some unknown cause, circumstances, some unknown cause, which had led to the act. I could not forget her face, her manner, the clear, womanly look of her eyes—she was no murderess, and it was not in my heart to denounce her as such. Besides, if I took this responsibility it would only serve to shield other crimes of more importance than the violent death of this Chilean revolutionary—the murder perhaps of many innocent victims, and the destruction of much valuable property. For Alva's death would hardly stop the plotting already on foot. The money was still here in New York ready to be used; the propagandists at Washington would never permit it to long lie idle. They would find somewhere another leader, and I alone seemed to be in a position to talk their ballish purpose. Perhaps it was even put out of the way. He had acted too slowly, and suspicion might have been aroused as to his real purpose. On every side I was assailed with doubt.

Yet, even if I held silent, I knew not in which direction to turn. I had apparently lost all touch with the girl. She had failed me completely—either by accident, or design. Her appointment with me had served to reveal only one fact which might prove of importance—247 Le Compté street was undoubtedly a link in the chain of the conspiracy; it was the home of Ivan Waldron. Once I told this discovery to Harris the way might be opened to closer investigation. But what had become of Harris? It was already approaching six o'clock, and the man had not telephoned me. Surely he must be aware by this time of the murder of Alva; the uselessness of seeking longer to find him alive. Was he also endeavoring to avoid me? Was his purpose deceitful, or had some suspicion arisen in his mind as to my really being Harry Daly?

Aroused by this possibility, and unable to remain quiet longer, I slipped a revolver from the depths of my bag into a coat pocket, and departed again.

"They Tell Me You're Hunting Parker."

for Costigan's, determined to learn the truth. I approached the same bartender with whom I had spoken in the morning, and he must have recalled me at once, for, without answering my question, he turned and called out to a heavily set, red-faced fellow at the lower end of the bar.

"Dan, here's that guy who was asking for Parker. He ain't heard nuthin' from him."

The other came forward, elbowing his way roughly through the crowd, and looked me searchingly in the face. "I'm Costigan," he said shortly. "They tell me you're hunting Parker. Did you have an appointment with him?"

"Yes; he was to meet me here this morning. Then I left a telephone number, but he hasn't called me."

"He ain't been back; that's the reason. Come along with me; I want a private word with you."

I followed him rather doubtfully, although his words and actions appeared friendly enough in a gruff way. He led the way to a closed door at the end of the bar, which, when opened, disclosed a small business office, containing merely a desk and two chairs.

To his rather gruff invitation to sit down, I accepted one of these, crouching at the edge between my teeth, and endeavoring to appear quite at ease. Costigan, after securing the door, seated himself at the desk, turning his swivel chair about so as to face me, his freckled hands on his knees.

"George told me about you this morning," he began. "At least I suppose you're the lad; your name Daly?"

I nodded, greatly relieved, but unwilling to trust my voice. The man did not know me; had no suspicion. "Glad ter meet yer," and Costigan filled a pipe, and touched a match to the tobacco without removing his steady gaze from my face. "We never had no dealings together, but if yer tied up with George, it's quite likely we will have. He an' I have been pardners for a long while. He's a h— of a good guy."

"We just ran into each other accidentally," I explained, feeling that he expected me to say something. "Got onto the trail of the same boodle. He told you, I suppose?"

"No, he didn't. Just said he'd run onto you, and that you were liable to turn a trick together. George don't sloop over; that ain't his style."

"But he spoke about me?"

"Well, yes, in a way. But it wasn't no more than I told yer. He had to go out afore you got 'round, so he said you was comin', an' for me to be decent to yer whenever yer showed in."

"How long was he to be gone?"

"You must have faith in me, in spite of all."

DARLING BABY BRIGHTENS HOME

Children's Laughter a Pleasing Sound

Altoona, Pa.—"I am writing to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. We had six children die almost at birth. From one hour to nineteen days is all they have lived. Before my next one was born I took a dozen bottles of your Vegetable Compound, and I can say that it is the greatest medicine on earth, for this baby is now four months old, and a healthier baby you would not want. I am sending you a picture of her. Everybody says 'That is a very healthy looking baby.' You have my consent to show these few lines to anybody."—Mrs. C. W. BENZ, 131 3rd Avenue, Altoona, Pa.

Mrs. Janssen's experience of interest to childless wives. Millston, Wis.—"I want to give you a word of praise for your wonderful medicine. We are fond of children, and for a considerable time after we were married I feared I would not have any. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it strengthened me so I now have a nice, strong, healthy baby girl. I suffered very little at childbirth, and I give all the credit to your medicine, and shall always recommend it highly."—Mrs. H. H. JANSSEN, Millston, Wis.

Mrs. Held of Marinette, Wis., adds her testimonial for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She says:

Marinette, Wis.—"I was in a nervous condition and very irregular. My doctor advised an operation. My husband brought me one of your booklets and asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It overcame my weakness so that I now have a healthy baby girl after having been married nine years. I am glad to recommend your medicine, and you may use my letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. H. B. HELD, 330 Jefferson St., Marinette, Wis.

There are many such homes that were once childless, and are now blessed with healthy, happy children because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored the mother to a strong and healthy condition, as it acts as a natural restorative for ailments as indicated by backache, irregularities, displacements, weakness and nervousness.

Women everywhere should remember that most of the commoner ailments of women are not the surgical ones—they are not caused by serious displacements or growths, although the symptoms may be the same, and that is why so many apparently serious ailments readily yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it acts as a natural restorative. It can be taken with perfect safety and often prevents serious troubles.

Therefore if you know of any woman who is suffering and has been unable to secure relief and is regretfully looking forward to a childless old age, ask her to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it has brought health and happiness into so many homes once darkened by illness and despair.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent to you free upon request. Write to The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

I. He would wait one more week and if he couldn't get justice he would kill himself. The week was almost up. He had one more hour to live—this day which was now closing would be his last. He sat alone on his bunk staring at the clock in the guard room. Sixty minutes more of the strife and turmoil of life—then eternal rest and peace.

The minutes slipped slowly by. He stretched himself at full length on his bunk, with an army automatic in his hand, one that he had smuggled past the guards, musing on what lay behind him; but he was himself to blame. It had been a long struggle—he tried to make good, he thought he never had a chance, he thought he would not get justice, but now it was almost over, and he was glad. At home his dear little wife Vida, that she was—would never know what a failure he had been. He had planned things well.

At midnight a cry of terror and then the revolver shot! A moment was all it would take. They would find him lying on the floor beside his bunk. They would call it suicide. He had been complaining of his health. His wife Vida knew that his health was failing she would think that was why he killed himself. He smiled—a baggy, mirthless smile—and pressed his hands against his throbbing temples.

A fit of coughing seized him. He must have closed his eyes; or perhaps for an instant he fainted. When he again looked up, a man was standing quietly in the doorway of his cell—a developed man with large, gentle eyes that regarded him compassionately. There was something compelling in the gaze of those eyes—something that made him forget to be surprised. Where had he seen this man? Yes, he knew, they had taken him to headquarters one day to question him in regard to his trial. Yes, this was an army officer, the one that did all the talking at his hearing. He knew he was not mistaken. Yes, this was the new commanding officer.

"What is your name?" asked the officer gently.

"Ernest Johnson, Private Co. C, 37th Inf., stationed at this post sir," he answered. He wondered vaguely at his submission to this stronger will. Yet he was neither angered nor afraid only dully curious.

The officer dropped his hand from the iron door against which he was leaning and came slowly forward.

"You had better put that away for a time," he said in a quiet manner, and he pointed to the automatic that lay forgotten in Johnson's lap. You do not need it just now."

Johnson slipped the weapon into the back pocket of his pants. His glance fell on the white clock face. True, he did not need it yet. There were still forty-five minutes before midnight.

The commanding officer seemed to answer his thoughts.

"Three quarters of an hour is a long time," he said, "long enough for what I have to show you." He smiled reassuringly. "Will you go with me? There are some things I want you to see."

"Yes," he said meekly, "if you will bring me back by midnight."

"Of course, I know what it is you have planned—I would not thwart you—even if I could."

It was raining when they reached the street—a raw, chilling rain, and a wind that seemed to choke Johnson in his throat and made his cough much worse.

He shivered as they hurried forward for he had no coat only a blue jumper.

The commanding officer took Johnson into a brick building some distance from the guard house, thence to a large room. Johnson could see the whole room quite clearly from where they stood in the shadows. It was a large room, with a long table and a few small tables arranged to resemble a court room. Around these tables sat a body of officers and at still another table sat a thin, drawn, white-faced soldier, beside him sat another officer and they sat separate from the rest.

It was the soldier on whom Johnson's interest chiefly centered. He was a young fellow about Johnson's age, with a delicate, sensitive face, unmarked by illness. His hands lay idle in his lap and Johnson noticed then that his whole attitude as he sat hunched in his chair was twisted and unnatural.

The officers in the room were all talking. The one at the soldier's side also was talking—it seemed as though he was defending this young man. Johnson turned questioning to his companion, the commanding officer.

"Some time ago he was a successful soldier," the officer whispered.

"Fame and wealth were almost in his grasp; but one day he became foolish. He deserted the army. The things around which he had built his life were taken from him. Now he has come to this."

Johnson pondered. "What are they doing?" The officer's big, gentle eyes met Johnson's. "He has been apprehended and is now being tried to see if he is guilty or not guilty."

"Is there—no hope?" Johnson asked. "Will he be sentenced and will he get justice?" "He will get justice, for all of these officers you see will hear all evidence and then they will judge."

"But his health," Johnson said as his voice unconsciously rose above a whisper, but no one except the officer seemed to hear him.

"They will consider that also," the officer remarked.

Johnson was silent. It was cold where he was standing, a fit of coughing seized him.

"Your cough is very bad," said the officer. He laid his hand sympathetically on Johnson's arm.

"Consumption, perhaps?"

"Good heaven, no!" ejaculated Johnson in horror. "A bronchial cold. I caught it a few weeks ago. I'm all run down—nervous and worried. Not about my health particularly—about my trial and Vida my wife. The doctor said I'd be all right in another month if I could take care of myself."

The officer smiled. "You are very fortunate; do not worry over your trial, for your previous good record, your health and your wife will all be considered."

"But why must I wait so long?"

"The wheels of the army are slow; they must consider everything in your case carefully before they can call you to trial."

Before Johnson could answer his attention was again brought to the room.

The officer beside the soldier seems to get excited. He was talking rapidly and pounding the table with his first. The commanding officer plucked at Johnson's sleeve. "See he is fighting to have the soldier freed."

Johnson noticed that after the officer ceased his talking, he left the room, followed by the soldier while all the other officers pondered over the evidence before them to see what was the proper thing to do with this soldier.

Soon the officer, soldier and the soldier's wife entered the room.

When all were seated and the room was quiet the judge advocate read the sentence.

He was to be acquitted.

The soldier let his head drop to his hands. "I'm happy," he said in tears as his wife ran to him overjoyed at the result of his trial.

"Let us go. There is nothing more to see here. That scene will be repeated forever till such time as the men will realize the seriousness of doing a thing that is against the military laws," said the officer.

"Some will pay the penalty; others will not."

MEND STREET PLAN

This is the route coming through Antioch. Mr. Russell expected a confirmation of this report within two or three days.

Mr. Russell took a survey of the new proposed street for a grading. This street, as planned, is to run from Depot street to Johnson street, about 300 feet east of Main street and is expected to relieve the congestion on the main street through the parking of cars there by shoppers.

Mr. Chase Webb attended the meeting Tuesday night and encouraged the board by his willingness to cooperate in the present plans and his many helpful suggestions for their success. A few more enthusiastic property owners like Mr. Webb would prove a great help to the board.

Funeral of Harry P. Beck

Funeral services were held for Harry P. Beck at the F. Beck home at 2 o'clock the afternoon of Thursday, October 20. Rev. S. Jelele conducted the services and gave a very excellent sermon, speaking with great sympathy to the bereaved relatives. Burial was in the family plot at Green Ridge cemetery, Kenosha. When the funeral procession reached Salem avenue, Kenosha, a military escort from the American Legion met the procession and conducted it to the cemetery. The American Legion had charge of the services at the grave and the military salute was fired.

Six friends of the deceased acted as bearers, John and Edward Mutz, Wm. May, Howard Hamilton, Harold Reed and John Hasselman. The floral tributes were very beautiful and their number testified to the many friendships Harry had made during his short residence in Wilmot.

Smith of the training school of Union Grove, gave an excellent talk and the music of the evening was furnished by Mrs. Wilbur Lewis, accompanied by Mrs. Becker. Mrs. Lewis gave a group of songs, "Into the Garden of Love," "Sheep and Lambs," and "My Heart is the Lute," in a very charming manner. She is possessed of an excellent voice and her execution was very highly praised.

SUGGESTIONS FROM FARM BUREAU MEET

More profitable production through the use of better live stock, improved varieties of grain and an increased acreage of legumes were the main considerations at the conference of farm advisers, officers and office secretaries held at Aurora, October 17 and 18. H. E. Flood, president of the Lake County Farm Bureau; Miss Blanche Osborne, office secretary, and C. E. Wheelock, farm adviser, attended this conference, which included the counties in the northern part of the state.

A growing feeling of confidence in the work and purpose of the farm bureau was expressed by those who have opportunity to travel over the state. No small part of this confidence is due to the character of the men who are leaders in the organization.

In 1912 two counties in the state had farm bureaus, while today 95 of the 102 counties have adopted this form of farm organization.

Professor W. F. Handschin, of the department of farm management, centered his talk around the following points:

1. It is not likely there will be much change in farm prices in the near future.
2. Our best hope is that prices of other commodities will come down until a unit of farm produce will buy a normal number of units of those respective commodities.
3. When the other fellow keeps up the price it does not necessarily indicate prosperity, for he may not be selling goods.
4. Our relief does not lie in the direction of increased production; but rather in improved production, which may even be decreased production, at least a decrease in acreage of those cereal crops of which we now have a large surplus.

The farm management department has had careful records kept on a number of farms, and finds that the ones that show the best financial record are the ones that consistently have from one-fifth to one-fourth of the farm in legumes every year. The best record was made by a farm where sweet clover was used as the legume. This crop was pastured and the corn harvested in the field by hogs. Oats and rape were used for early pasture. By this system of letting the stock harvest the crops and using plenty of legumes, one man did most of the work on 145 acres and got a return of $26.00 per acre this year.

Lake county will grow sweet clover, red clover, and alfalfa in abundance. The result of investigation point to more profit on our farms by greater use of legumes, especially clover.

Demonstrations have been found very profitable in showing improved methods of production. In this locality a number suggest themselves: Spraying to control the potato blight, which is caused by a small insect called the leaf hopper; variety tests of grain, demonstration plot showing the effect of corn root rot, pruning and spraying home orchards, effect of limestone and phosphate, value of cow testing records, results of a well-called poultry flock, and numbers of others might be mentioned. Perhaps the most important one, sweet clover as a pasture crop, was omitted from the list above. The Lake county farm bureau plans to have some demonstrations of this kind next year.

A period of low prices, of all times, is the one to practice every available means of cutting the cost of production, and such demonstrations as these mentioned will give many hints on how it can be done.

Other prices are slowly coming down, not with the sudden jolt that hits farmers so hard, but we can see a slow drop in prices all along the line. We do not care so much where prices are, just so there is a margin between cost and selling price.

As Professor Handschin said, our hope is that the lowering of other prices will bring about this margin. Club work for boys and girls was also considered at the conference, with emphasis on quality rather than quantity. Aurora is planning a big fair next year, and will probably offer some attractive prizes for club entries. This, with our county fair, should add much to the interest in club work.

The last half day of the conference was given over to work of committees that reported their suggestions on soils, crops, dairying, livestock, horticulture and insect control.

Twelve Thousand Five Hundred Cows On Test

Just in Illinois, and some states, especially Wisconsin, have more than that.

According to Mr. Lovett, in charge of state test association work, this state has 25 associations and about 500 cows in each. The Lake County association now being organized will begin its year December 1. Some preliminary work was done last week by Mr. Lovett, Anton Christiansen, the tester for our local association, and C. E. Wheelock. A number of new men were found who are interested in testing. Some of the old members of the association are planning on official work for next year.

Mr. Lovett will be here again about the first of November and will help in completing the number for the association. Mr. Christiansen plans to visit his mother in Denmark as soon as this year's work is over. Mr. Christiansen stands with the best in that line of work in the state. The extension department has another competent man in mind for the work in Lake county next year.

Cow testing is one of the most important means of studying the dairy herd with the purpose of producing milk economically and developing a herd where every cow shows a profit.

Work Really a Privilege.

son's voice. "It isn't that, it isn't that. I'm sure of Vida. She loves me—God knows I'm sure of that."

"She would follow you anywhere," said the officer. "You are sure of that, aren't you? No matter what happened to you—what trouble, what disgrace came—she would stand firmly at your side. I know that—and so do you. You are very fortunate—very fortunate indeed—to be so blessed."

Johnson turned to him piteously. "Can't we go now? I want to go back. I'm all on edge. I want to think it out quietly."

The officer's arm about Johnson tightened with compassion. "We will go at once—of course," he said very quietly and simply.

Johnson came to the sudden knowledge that he had been watching the clock hands steadily.

One minute to twelve.

He had not realized it was so late. The time had come! He was back in his cell. The commanding officer had left. He gripped the revolver in his hand and told himself he must go through with it. Trembling and cold he stood up trying to separate in his tired brain the real from the fancied.

A calm, gentle voice seemed ringing in his ears. He heard the words again as plainly as though someone was speaking them aloud.

"God will not allow suicide or anything wrong to be done on impulse unthinking. And so always there comes at the eleventh hour a great understanding. It may be heeded—it may not. But it comes, for that is God's way."

Johnson never understood things as he had now. He had been worried, depressed, nervous. He thought of his wife Vida and knew she would stick by him through this ordeal as firm as rock. He thought over what he had seen in civilian life, then his thoughts went back to the court room. He knew then he would get justice. He would win out. The little clock in the guard room began striking its twelve musical strokes. Johnson rose from his bunk half asleep, looked around, saw he was still in his cell; the other prisoners were fast asleep, then thought for a moment as a smile played on his face. It was only a dream.
